RABBI'S REFLECTIONS

On the Shabbat before Purim, we read the Torah portion reminding us of the commandment to erase the name of Amalek. Tradition teaches that Haman was a descendant of this people who attacked the Israelites as they left Egypt. They attacked the rear of the marching column, their victims were the tired, the old, the young, those who could not keep up.

The Story of Purim is the ultimate fulfillment of this Mitzvah. Haman is ultimately killed, and the Jews are rescued. The rescue happens through the intervention of Queen Esther, who had, by chance, recently become Queen. The story of Purim is full of coincidences. However, nothing would have helped had Esther NOT taken advantage of the lucky position in which she found herself.

Other disastrous threats are not so easily averted. History, certainly Jewish history, is full of situations in which the Haman of the day was NOT defeated. Each threat is different, each situation is unique, but in order to overcome adversity, we've had to find a strategy that could keep us going for just one more day.

We've all been following the news from Ukraine. Though thousands of miles away, most of us understand the broad consequences of that war.

The war in the former Yugoslavia was a shocking reminder of how tribalism can raise its ugly head, even in so-called advanced countries. But that was an internal conflict, a civil war. The invasion of Ukraine is even more upsetting. We managed all during the cold war not to get into a direct armed conflict with Russia. And now... it's just a shot away.

RABBI'S REFLECTIONS

We do not have a Queen Esther upon whom to rely in this situation. We don't have Mordechai. Many of the decisions that will shape the course of this conflict are way above our pay grade, so to speak. Nevertheless, we are forbidden to despair. We've got to look at the things we can do to help. Ukrainian refugees are pouring into some of the poorest countries in Europe.

Organizations like the HIAS are on the ground providing shelter, clothing and food.

You and I may not be able to stop Haman. BUT, we can give a whole lot of people something to be grateful for, something to make them smile, on this coming Purim. We cannot drive Putin out of the Ukraine, the way Esther got rid of Haman. But, we can send mishloach manot, gifts, and matanot le'evyonim, charity so that their lot is more bearable. This Purim, at the Megillah reading, we will collect donations for HIAS and Leket, the first an American-based aid organization, and the second, Israel based.

Never think that the one thing you can do to help... is too small.

The one thing you can do is... the one thing you can do. It will encourage a refugee somewhere to bear their lot with a little more strength. If we can't get rid of Haman, we can at least take care of his victims.

Purim Sameach!

Rabbi Eric S. Cohen, PhD

FROM THE DESK OF OUR PRESIDENT

This month, my message is simple: enjoy life by engaging with others. Or, as quoted by the Dalai Lama:

"We humans are social beings. We come into the world as the result of others' actions. We survive here in dependence on others. Whether we like it or not, there is hardly a moment of our lives when we do not benefit from others' activities. For this reason it is hardly surprising that most of our happiness arises in the context of our relationships with others."

I'm excited! To me, the month of March is a time to move forward from the cold, dark days of winter and transition to the coming springtime. I welcome the reminder to renew my commitment to my goals, get outside and meet the neighbors for an enjoyable walk, reconnect with friends I haven't spoken to in a while, and contribute to the community. These are lessons I gleaned from the celebration of Purim.

At the FJCC, the beginning of March is all about Purim. The holiday preparations start with a hamantashen baking (and tasting) party and a Sisterhood gift bag stuffing party on February 26th. We will celebrate with "merrymaking" as we welcome kids in costume at the Purim Dinner and Family Megillah reading, followed by a hamantashen dessert party. The fun continues on March 12th at the youth-led Purim Carnival and Cafe. We will participate in the mitzvah of giving gifts of food to friends and family (Mishloach Manot) by delivering yummy goodie bags to our congregants. Please answer the door when the FJCC member comes visiting. And, we will participate in the mitzvah of giving gifts to the poor (Matanot La'evyonim) through the Hebrew School canned food drive and the collection for Leket Israel (Israeli food pantry).

Take this opportunity to volunteer while having fun and making new connections with FJCC members.

SPOTLIGHT ON THE GIFT OF LIFE

This Dvar Torah is dedicated to the memory of Sarah Bat Avraham and Lauren Block, the donating kind. In January we read parsha Va'eirah, which relates Moshe and Aaron's lineage in some detail. In doing so Hashem is underlining their importance to us and to G-d.

When one counts or names something you are assigning to each thing counted or named a unique identity. In a census you are assigning a unique identity to each individual. Similarly, the book of Bamidbar, which in English we refer to as the book of Numbers. The name comes from the book's obsession with them. There are several censuses, casualty counts, and a detailed accounting of the gifts of the various tribes at the dedication of the Mishkan (tabernacle).

In the censuses in Bamidbar, the word "shmo" is constantly used in referring to the persons counted. Translated, shmo is "his name". Hashem wants us to know that he is looking at individuals. He wants to create a deep personal bond with each of us. It reflects his deep love and caring for us. Both the parsha and the book also show that if anyone is missing, the nation and Hashem's own glory is diminished.

Besides our own set of interests and goals, we are unique down to the very genetic code that is the foundation of our existence. This uniqueness is important on several levels. One important thing is that it allows our bodies to recognize foreign proteins and eliminate them.

While we are unique, we are not self-sufficient. Rashi's commentary on Parsha Vayechi quotes Midrash Tamchuma. The Midrash discusses that various tribes have different, complementary missions. To make Israel work, it takes all the tribes.

It makes me think about a Miranda Lambert lyric. In her song, All Kinds of Kinds, the chorus is “Ever since the beginning to keep the world spinning, it takes all kinds of kinds.” Let’s take a look at a specific application.

On a basic level, since we are all unique and our bodies look for and eliminate alien proteins, it makes organ and tissue donation difficult. Transplanted organs and tissues are alien proteins. While there are drugs that suppress this activity you still need histologically similar donors. Drugs can only do so much. Given that fact, and the circumstances that are required to have viable organs to donate, one needs a large pool of donors.

Ramban in his commentary on the many censuses in the book states several reasons for the constant counting. The first reason he cites is to show the miraculous growth of the Jewish people in Egypt and that he loved them very much. He also needed to show that each person is important to G-d and that the nation was not complete without each person.

It always bears remembering that 50,000 people die in the US each year waiting for an organ. When someone dies, they are removed from this world. His or her friends, family and this world are diminished. The glory of Hashem is diminished.

This diminishment is exaggerated when the death is premature and preventable. We are diminished and incomplete as a nation. We are shown his love when we are able to prevent premature death. In 2020 (the last year I was able to find statistics for) the Sharing Network obtained 572 organs were transplanted thanks to 222 donors in New Jersey, including 339 kidneys, 124 livers, 50 hearts, 45 lungs and 14 pancreases. And there were 46,462 tissue and eye donations. Tissue donations include corneas, heart valves, skin grafts, and bone grafts, ligament and tendons for people in its region. Another number that will make The Count happy.

It also takes money. Organ donors and their families are not charged with the costs of donation. These families need support. They have just lost a loved one suddenly and tragically. Counseling is required to help them deal with that loss. There are costs to locate and transport organs and tissue, to determine who is compatible with a given organ, and other important services. Financial support is needed. It takes volunteers to raise funds, support people and spread the word. Volunteers are irreplaceable. The fact that I am here and healthy and able to speak with you, is proof of the efficacy and need to support donation.

Ms. Lambert hit it on the head. It takes all kinds of kinds. Support organ donation. Be the Organ donor kind. Be the financial support kind. Be the volunteer kind. Be whatever kind you want. Just be kind.
